To Whom It May Concern:

As Alison Larkin's mother and the person who has known her the longest, I feel uniquely qualified to offer this letter of recommendation to any potential employer as a testimony of her fine character, high intelligence, good hygiene, and especially her punctuality.

Alison's amazing imagination was obvious early on when, at the age of three, she drew a picture of an unidentifiable creature with a bunny on its head who was wearing a hat of daisies --- the first of many frameable pieces she would produce for our home. Alison's creativity has continued to mature and flourish with the years, as she has maintained her passion for her career in marketing.

While I was happy for Alison and as proud as any mother could be, I cried bitter tears the day she struck out on her own after college; and although it has been two decades, I still miss the daily pleasures of her companionship, her quick wit, and our many evenings of deep conversation over hot cocoa. Although I do still enjoy my solitary hot cocoa.

I will close for fear of raising suspicions of personal bias, of which I have none. However, if my objectivity should come into question, I will be happy to secure a letter of recommendation from my husband.

Please feel free to contact me directly with any questions you might have about Alison, her perfect husband or their two adorable children.

Most sincerely,

KD Stotler
